- "The prices are fixed by the Government. One kg of wheat costs 17 Leva, ie that is what the Government pays for it. If an individual wants to buy wheat, 15 kg cost 2,500 Leva, a price nobody can afford. The authorities pay 8-9 Leva for 1 kg of barley. However, 1 'shilik' (a measure, approximately 15 kg) costs 1,800 Leva on the free market. Similarly while the Government purchases 1 kg of corn for 12-13 Leva, it costs 100 Leva for the population if they want to buy. Other prices: 1 kg sugar on ration coupons costs 240 Leva, 1 piece of soap of poor quality, sold by the Government, 100 Leva, 1 kg of oil 650 Leva.
- 8. "Asked whether the farmers are allowed to sell their livestock, Halit Tunaci, related that the possibilities for such sale are very limited. Although there is no provision prohibiting such transactions, with the exception of animals which were surrendered to the kolkhoz, the authorities have various means to interfere. Tunaci had two cows left after the war. He succeeded in selling one finally at the neighboring village, Yenipazar. However, when the authorities found this out, he was commelled to buy the cow back.
- 9. "Before he left the country, he finally succeeded in selling both of his cows to his uncle, living in the same village for 26,000 Leva. This was a reasonable price for them, because they were young strong cows, good for milking, as well as for work in the fields."
